GERMANY, ITALY SET TO FIRE ON RUSS SHIPS

London, Oct. 24.—(INS)—Along with the news that the Soviet ships, a fleet of Soviet cargo ships, had been reported heading from the Black Sea to Spain today, the news that Germany and Italy will open fire on the ships in the Mediterranean Sea might mean all Europe soon war.

Russia has two avenues through which to carry out her determination to aid the Lefter in Spain. The first is to send her ships to the aid of the Lefter. The second is to send her ships to the aid of the Lefter.

Held "Orphan Annie" Ticket

All eyes gaze on the lucky sweepstake ticket which made Mr. and Mrs. John Curzon and their two children, Sally, three, and Joan, one, $4180 richer today. The ticket bore the non-descript "Orphan Annie," of Massachusetts avenue, South End. There was some difficulty contacting owners of the ticket.

Duce Acclaims World Peace In Speech to Italians

Rome, Italy, Oct. 24 (AP)—Benito Mussolini, laughing, said he pronounced a "message of peace" from the city of towers this afternoon.

He spoke in the gorgeously decorated central piazza, not far from the spot where suddenly, exactly 10 years ago, a young fanatic fired at him, splitting the back of his head.

This was his first visit since that day and he stood out in a hundred thousand Italians that although Italy can count on "eight million bayonets," she intends to live at peace with the world.

In an excited speech at Carraia, the Duce, avoiding direct mention of the Spanish war, picked out the troublesome word "internationalism" and held it out as a representative of "the present ideal of Europe."

ITALY HAS RIGHTS

In this spontaneous outburst, where the famous Italian leader, Benito Mussolini, spoke to hundreds of Italians in the Piazza del Popolo, he said:

"While the European horizon darkens under a cloud of uncertainty and disorder, Italy offers to the world the admirable spectacle of calmness and discipline, the civil Roman virtues."

However, he told the cheering multitude:

"People like the Italian people, heirs to an ancient and magnificent civilization, have certain rights on the surface of this earth."

He then shouted, as he mounted the rostrum, his desire to "launch a message which should go beyond the mountains and the seas."

"It is a message of peace," he cried. "Peace in work, and work in peace."

"FORESTS OF BAYONETS"

Before he spoke, the exultant Italians had driven 30,000 head of cattle before him to show their solid concrete evidence of their agricultural wealth.

The cattle clattered through a piazza blazing with banners and shouting 14 Roman virtues, surrounded by silver eagles.

The Duce proclaimed:

"To Benito Mussolini, founder of Empire."

Mussolini declared it was a "great old branch which I hold aloft at the end of the fourteenth year of Fascism and the beginning of the fifteenth."

"This olive branch," he proclaimed, "sprouts from an immense forest, and this forest is one of eight million bayonets, well-sharpened and gripped by young men with untiring hearts."

He recounted the efforts being made to supply all of the Empire's needs, and said one column now is penetrating Western Ethiopia to search "the plasmon government" which Heile Selassie considers is operating at the city of Gore.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—(INS)—Fascists will preach against Communism in several Roman Catholic churches throughout the nation tomorrow—the day of the Feast of Christ the King—it was learned today.

The drive against the acknowledged enemy of the church is under the sponsorship of a national committee headed by the Most Rev. John Francis Callahan of Fort Wayne, Ind.

An announcement from Fort Wayne explained:

"The priests will denounce Communism as the arch enemy of the Constitution of the United States, the American form of Democratic government, the American home. They will point out that Communism is opposed to private ownership of property and would not out American business as known to this country."

"They will show how Communism destroys personal initiative and would rob of every American youth the desire to succeed on his own."

"Drawing their analogies from Russia, Spain, and Mexico, these thousands of parish priests will trace the path of Communism down from the Russian revolution on the other side of the world to the path strewn with misery, slavery and human sacrifice."

100,000 in Spain's List of Missing

London, Oct. 24 (INS)—Seven hundred Red Militia members here have been killed on the southern front alone in Spain's civil war, according to the London Daily Mail. Only 2000 Nationalist soldiers have been killed.

Figures received by General Franco, revealed that an estimated 100,000 persons had disappeared throughout Spain as a result of atrocities committed by Spanish Reds.

attacks between Italy and Africa and Italian ships and planes are allegedly based at the re-occupied Italian ports, demonstrating the only ports left open to the Spanish locals.

Italy May Bolt Parley; Portugal-Spain Break

By The Associated Press

London, Oct. 24.—Three European nations, holding two opposing views in the Spanish civil war, are expected to have already reached neutrality status today.

Russia led the way by maintaining a strict and unyielding diplomatic efforts to prevent spread of the peninsula conflict over the Spanish border.

Portugal complicated the problem by breaking off diplomatic relations with Spain after the London non-intervention committee postponed action on a proposal to blockade Portugal.

French Russia alleged aid is flowing to Spanish insurgents.

Italy was reported considering withdrawal from the neutrality group at an auxiliary session scheduled for today.

In addition to the perplexing side issues, there still remained to be decided the authenticity of two sets of charges of violation of the "hands off Spain" agreement announced by 27 European nations.

These included:

1.—Soviet allegations that Italy, Germany and Portugal were furnishing assistance in Spanish fascists—allegations with details from the three accused nations.

2.—Counter charges from Russia, Germany and Portugal that Russia was helping the Madrid Nationalist government—allegations the Soviet representative offered to answer verbally, but was said to reply to in writing.

3.—Counter charges from Italy, Germany and Portugal were furnished assistance in Spanish fascists—allegations with details from the three accused nations.

The next session of the general neutrality group was set for Wednesday.

MRS. SIMPSON ANSWERS TO U. S. FRIENDS

By THOMAS WATSON

London, England, Oct. 24.—The eyes of the world will be focused on this sleepy, old-fashioned country town during the next four days when Justice Sir John Hewart in the full panoply of state president at the Suffolk Assizes will open this morning.

In the course of this assize the judge will be called upon to adjudicate the undetected divorce petition of Mrs. Wallis Simpson, American-born, against Prince Albert, Duke of Windsor.

This petition is formally scheduled for the matrimonial cause list.

Both the divorce petitioners, London, Class of case—W. (meaning wife divorcing). Names of parties—Simpson, W. versus Simpson, P. A. Respondent's solicitors—Middleton Lewis Company.

Evidence will be given by Mrs. Simpson and also by a chambermaid of the Hotel De Paris, Mrs. C. G. Hamilton, Chambermaid.

The alleged misconduct, on the basis of which Mrs. Simpson's petition was filed, occurred, it is stated in the suit, about three months ago.

The case has been referred to the French assize assize by the Lord Chief Justice.

It is expected to be heard Tuesday afternoon, although it may be heard any time after the opening of the assizes.

Mrs. Simpson, staying in a house on Woodbridge road in the town of Rushmore, four miles east of Ipswich.

After she is granted a divorce decree she is expected to return to England, where she will live with her daughter, Mrs. Wallis Simpson, in London.

'Hamlet' Goes on Air

LESLIE HOWARD

ANN MARSTERS

'Milk Theft Girls' Go Home

Three "girl milkers" returned to their homes yesterday, leaving behind them the prison bars which they had been confined in at the Women's Reformatory at Sherborn.

They had been prisoners at the reformatory since Sept. 1, when they were sentenced to five years in a Massachusetts prison for stealing two bottles of milk.

Actually these girls are big sisters who must mother orphaned babies and husbands and widowed fathers.

These girls, Catherine Grotton, Winifred Riley, and Jean Mahan, of Lowell, were released after serving a month and a day of their five-year sentence, when they were granted a full pardon by the governor, Joseph P. Kamp.

These milk-theft girls took up their former routine when they were released. They returned to their homes and families.

REBAGGAGED FROM RADIO BY CROWD

El Centro, Cal., Oct. 24 (AP)—John Richardson, Communist congressional candidate, returned to Los Angeles today after a crowd of 300 persons had dragged him from the front of a radio microphone here last night and pelted him with rotten eggs and fruit.

Forming about the radio station, the crowd pulled a switch, cutting him off the air as he began to talk, then escorted him to a vacant lot nearby.

There members ordered him to make his speech, but hauled him down and forced him to go to the railroad station where he was taken to his room.

Previously, Communist party officials sought unsuccessfully to State and Federal courts to obtain an injunction forbidding peace officers from interfering with the broadcast.

Frank M. Bowles, manager of the radio station (KGO) here, told police his men were first when the crowd invaded the station. The agents were in the walls.

Army-Navy Union Demands Red Air Ban
Washington, Oct. 2 (US)—Declaring the Communist party should be recognized under the constitution as an American organization, the Army and Navy Union of the United States today demanded the federal communications commission bar Red spokesmen from the air.

Taking a firm stand on other patriotic organizations which have bitterly assailed the communists' over-requiring radio stations to record Communist speakers, the Army and Navy Union launched a scathing attack at what it called "the so-called fair play in your decision."

At the same time it became known the commission, flooded with vigorous demands to reverse its ruling, is delaying action on the proposal.

The Army and Navy Union protest, lodged by John J. Cirm, legislative chairman of the organization, and a former assistant secretary of the National Labor Relations board, is the protection of the principle for which it stands.

"Folly and Farewell" Next Huston Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Oct. 24 (US)—A neat $20,000 was paid by Samuel Goldwyn for the privilege of filming "Folly and Farewell," a magazine story of Richard Sherman.

I have no doubt Mr. Goldwyn would have been able to buy the story for less if Author Sherman had not already been paid for the story.

It is the story of a man who is a great success in Hollywood with his novel, "The Merry Men," which has been known for years.

Now that it is being made into a film, the story is being called "Folly and Farewell."

Isabel Lawrence Bride Today
In North Shore Ceremony

By BETTY ALDEN

SOMETIME DURING the next day or two Edward VIII, King of England, will pause in the pursuit of his endless royal duties, discussions of foreign engagements and threats of war long enough to read with whimsical reluctance the announcement of the wedding of a vivacious little American girl who was allowed to stay up late one evening in order to dance with him, the handsome Prince of Wales. . . . At that time the Prince was the house guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Lawrence, in Topsfield, when he made his famous visit to the North Shore, and daughter Isabel, who was nine or ten, joined the ranks of that exclusive group of women who have "dined with the Prince of Wales." . . . At noon today, Isabel walked up the aisle of Christ Church, in Cambridge, to become the bride of James Parker 2d, son of Mrs. J. Harrison Parker of Manchester. . . . Rt. Rev. William Lawrence and Rev. W. P. A. Burdette officiated before an altar bedecked with oak leaves and white chrysanthemums. . . . The golden-haired little bride wore orange blossoms in her hair, and her slippers, and her gown of bridal satin was clouded with a long tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of hyacinths. . . . Her nine attendants, all prominent members of the North Shore social set, were dressed with wreaths of chrysanthemums in their hair and bouquets of yellow and red chrysanthemums; their gowns were made with light hued, square necklines, three-quarter sleeves and long sweeping skirts. . . .

Mrs. Harrison Gardner (Elsie Lawrence), sister of the bride, was matron of honor. . . . Mr. Parker's debutante sister, Percy, the maid of honor. . . . The bridesmaids were Catherine and Cornelia Patterson, Alice Burrage, Mrs. Thomas Davis (Nancy Whitman), Mrs. Nathaniel Whitcomb (Bertha Bartlett), Dorothy West, and Phyllis Gardner, niece of the bride, flower girl. . . . Following the wedding there was a reception at the Lawrence home in Topsfield. . . . Mrs. Lawrence was groomed in a rust crepe robe de style with velvet trimmings, and Mrs. Parker's gown was black velvet with jade green trimmings. . . . John Harrison Parker, brother of the bride's best man, and the others included Richard Rowland Stephens, who married Edith Parker last summer, Richard Allen, Devens Hall, Charles Devens, Amory Lawrence, William Cox, all of Boston. . . . Also Richard Kernan, Harry L. Nicholas, Eben Whitman, Sumner Putnam and Robert Grant, all of New York, and G. W. Pepper of Philadelphia. . . .

The bride graduated from Everett School in 1933 and is a member of the Vincent Club. . . . Mr. Parker attended Harvard and belongs to A. T. The Towers, Tennis and Racquet, Essex County and Hasty Pudding Clubs. . . . After Thanksgiving the newweds will be at home at 180 Commonwealth avenue. . . .

Anne Hollister Makes Debut Tonight
FOLLOWING IN THE footsteps of her mother, who made her debut here in Boston in the 1914-15 season, Miss Anne Hollister of Cincinnati, will be presented this evening at a large dance given by her grandmother, Mrs. Montgomery Rollins, at The Country Club. . . .

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hollister (Eliel Robbins), are giving the ushering duties preceding the dance, at which about fifty close friends of the debutante will dine at one large U-shaped table. . . . Receiving in a corner of the ballroom, in front of a mirror screen flanked by massive candlesticks, the debutante will present a pretty picture in her gown of ice blue brocade with a coral ornament on the front to match her coral flowers. . . . Mrs. Hollister has chosen a gown of black velvet with a band of cream lace down the front and an ermine collar. . . .

Among the guests at the dinner will be Miss Sarah Louise Richards of Cincinnati, Miss Martha Bacon of New York, Miss Katherine Metcalf of Providence, all the usual many of whom are students at Harvard, Yale and Princeton, and a score or so of Boston debutantes. . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Perry of Dover, who are presenting their daughter Agnes at a tea this afternoon, will also give a dinner party in her honor before the dance. . . . Mrs. Henry A. Langhlin of Concord is entertaining a group of her daughter Lottie's close friends. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Ives are giving a dinner for their daughter, Charlotte. . . . And still others are entertaining at dinner parties are Miss Renee Schank, Mrs. Joe W. Meigs for Jeanne Clark, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Morse and Mr. and Mrs. William Bullard. . . .

Harvard-Dartmouth Ball

NO MATTER how the critics harp on the Green for the Green fared this afternoon, reports for both sides celebrated the victory at the pre-game ball held at the Hotel Somerset last evening. . . . Almost 2000 Harvardians, Harvardians and their girl friends crowded into the newly decorated Louis XIV ballroom to dance a victory dance. . . . In the throng we saw Polly Olney in a becoming black velvet gown with a red and gold lame sash and binding around the square neck. . . . Connie Matties and Robert Burnett, leaving rather early in order to be within the bounds of the late training restrictions. . . . Jane Whitney of Milton. . . . Arnetti McDermott wandering around in the mob, searching for his partner. . . . Sally Seudder, broad minded enough to dance with partners for each team, and though she was escorted by a Harvardian she danced frequently with Dartmouth's stars. . . . Evelyn Haseman and Ginny Richmond, Jane Dinamore, in a colorful dress of lemon yellow with ruching of sapphire blue around the hem and outlining the square bodice. . . . The Van Antwerp boys, Edith Kinder and Caroline Oveson and all important is the one who is Crown in their blue frock and Miss Little was, too, in her beautiful gown of plum satin with a deep border of shell pink. . . .

Try Exercises to Relieve
Fatigue at Night

By DONNA GRACE

WHEN YOU go home at night, exhausted and weary, try exercises. This may not seem reasonable, but if you relax the strain of those tense nerves and muscles, you will relax and the tired feeling will pass. . . . It is difficult, I know, to make any effort when we are tired, but why not try a few exercises and see what they will do for you? Begin by taking the strain off the back, the neck muscles and nerves. . . .

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Asleep at the Wheel

Reader Takes Nap in the World's Most Dangerous Place
By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY.

Here's Fred Luck, who lives in Brooklyn, N. Y. Fred drives one of those big transportation trucks that move between one city and another. Those lads might get back to their houses once in a while, but a good part of the time they do their sleeping on the big front seat of the truck parked at the side of the road. That's the sort of lad you have to watch on the fly. But I've nabbed Fred, and here's his story.

On a Thursday morning in November, Fred and his partner, Charlie, were delivering furniture at various houses in Brooklyn. They went out with a load, delivered it, and finished up about one o'clock in the afternoon. They had some lunch and pulled into the office at two, hoping they were through for the day.

But no such luck for Fred. He still had a monstrous job to do that day—and besides that there was a little adventuring to be taken care of. At that stage of the game, though, he didn't know anything about the adventuring.

After Fred had settled up his accounts, the manager called him into his office and told him the bad news. There was an immediate delivery to be made in Washington, D. C., and Fred had been elected to do the job.

They loaded the truck and were on their way. Route 1 was to be their home this time. They picked it up in Jersey City and rolled into Philadelphia about nine o'clock in the evening. Fred and Charlie knew a good lunch wagon in Philly, and they went there for dinner.

Back in the truck again, Fred suggested a nap. They had been up since early morning, and both of them were pretty tired.

They lay down on the seat and started to snooze, but not for long. After a brief interval they were awakened by a cop who told them that the main drag of the Quaker City was driving home and suggested that they take their big truck out of there. So now they started to move.

They threaded their way through the city, and more and more they were heading along the open road through a cold, bleak November night. The wind swept across the fields in gusts and the road ahead began to darken. Fred drove on through the night. The hours rolled by and he was getting more and more sleepy. Along about midnight a flimsy haze began to cloud his vision.

Says Fred: "The feeling was nothing new to me. It came from staring ahead over long periods, and had happened to me many times before. I knew that the best thing for me to do was to pull over to the side of the road for a short rest. I began looking for a convenient parking space, but the minutes fled by without a sign of a place to stop. The road was getting narrower and more gloomy. My eyes seemed to be getting heavy as I lay.

"We began to roll down hill. Flitting, fantastic shadows danced across the path of the headlights and the road about suddenly inclined in a long, steep, tortuous grade. I looked at Charlie and saw him curled up in the corner of the seat fast asleep. His head rested against the window. And then—"

And then, suddenly, Fred's eyes were shut and the truck was running wild.

Fred doesn't know how long his eyes were shut or how the truck managed to keep on the road. But something in the back of his brain, some divine instinct—brought him wide awake as suddenly as he had fallen asleep. As his eyes came open he was in the heart of the headlights, a sharp, narrow turn in the road and just at the beginning of the bend, a white concrete wall.

The headlights brought that scene to his eyes with startling clearness. "It didn't take me long to realize what that meant," says Fred. "A narrow bridge spanning—spanning what—that was the question. I didn't know, and for a minute it looked as if I never would know."

In the few seconds Fred had been asleep the speedometer had climbed to forty-five. A glance told him that and then he slammed on the brakes. "But even as I did so," he says, "I knew it would be useless. The bend in the road was too narrow to permit a quick turn with a large truck. I couldn't save myself from crashing into the wall."

Fred took a lightning glance to right and left, searching for a way out. There was a clear space at the beginning of the wall. How long it was—that he doesn't know, but he didn't know, but he determined to take a chance and trust to luck that he didn't run into a tree and pile up.

He turned his wheels and headed for a clear space. Then, just as his wheels left the road, the headlights showed him what was ahead. There were no trees in his way. There was nothing. The car was plunging toward a steep cliff, at the bottom of which lay the river.

Fred's heart lightened on the wheel. The top of the bank was a scant ten feet ahead, and he knew he would never be able to stop that car. When the time came he waited for the sickening plunge over the bank—and the end.

And then Fred got the surprise of his life. Suddenly, the truck slowed down as if wheels struck something soft and mushy. It moved another two or three feet and came to an abrupt stop. Fred climbed out of the cab and jumped to the ground, and heaved a sigh of relief and gratitude. The wheels had run into a pile of sand left by the highway patrol.

And Fred says: "As I was listening to the splash of water far below it certainly seemed to me as if Providence were riding with me that night. For if that pile of sand had been six feet to right or left, we would have shot over that clearing and dropped into the river below."

Fred got out of the truck and stepped that true adventure scene of yours into the mail box, and find for a real shocker note like the one I'm sending Fred. Monday Evening News or something, takes the stand with a story of the sign that was seen too late.

Floyd Gibbons will pay good money for good TRUE adventure stories. Hundreds of people in Boston and nearby towns have received ten-dollar and hundred-dollar bills for their yarns, and there's no reason why you can't do the same, for, as Floyd says, everybody has had at least one adventure. Fred A. Carlson of 57 Deaconess Court, Boston, won one hundred and ten dollars for the story of his life's biggest moment, and you can do the same. For further details, see the box at the right side of the page.

N. E. BUILDING

Steady GAINS ARE Shown

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Building and engineering operations in the New England area are showing a decided tendency to lift to higher levels, according to recent tabulations of F. W. Dodge.

For the latest week reported, October 20, the best total in any corresponding week since 1930 is shown.

With building and engineering operations for the week ended at $14,000, the results for all six weeks since the $14,000,000 in 1930 were topped. And of equal importance is the fact that the period shows an almost steady increase in work since the last of $14,000,000 in 1930.

One of the better ways to measure recovery in the United States is to measure it against that in England. And in doing so, the building and engineering industry is a perfect example of the method in practice. From the Administrative and Research Corporation weekly reports, it is shown that the following figures comparing British and American building and engineering work for the first nine months of this year British engineering work amounted to 74 per cent of the United States. In the United States, it was 23 per cent. In Britain, the last year's work expansion and contraction were 10 per cent. The United States fully four-fifths of the work in the building and engineering industry is for building.

Notebook. In the above the salient points are the difference in government borrowing, the difference in refunding and new issues, the difference in the government's non-mobilizing the money market to cover its spending, the difference in the government's policy of not expanding its credit, the difference in the government's policy of not allowing private individuals to have their hands in the building and engineering industry. And on the strength of these figures obtained from the source noted above, we have little chance for anyone to argue that the United States is not lagging at least two years behind Britain.

Early this week we advised a decline in building and engineering work. Of the two major groups, the building and engineering industry was the one that showed a decline. The reason for this was the fact that the building and engineering industry was the one that showed a decline. The reason for this was the fact that the building and engineering industry was the one that showed a decline.

This October 20, the Boston American Finance Index, a new index of the building and engineering industry, is reported by some observers. American Type Foundry is still reported as a "regional" or "local" range operation by the American Institute of Architects. Which also continues to hold with favor for National Bureau.

JOB SEEKING

Skill,
Initiative
Needed

By MERRILL STANLEY RUKESNER

New York, Oct. 23.—Economic recovery is helping the new crop of graduates to gain entrance to the business world.

Nevertheless, the individual job seeker needs skill and initiative to find an opportunity.

The managers of a substantial enterprise have recently asked me to give them a list of the things they want in a new hire. The list included:

"All right," was the answer. "You have a job right now. I'll give you the names of some new recruits to call on. I'll tell you how to get them. I'll tell you how to get them. I'll tell you how to get them."

"You have a job right now. I'll give you the names of some new recruits to call on. I'll tell you how to get them. I'll tell you how to get them. I'll tell you how to get them."

The particular initiative is that of John P. Hart, business manager in Princeton, N. J.

The job seeker should in each interview give the impression that he is not only a graduate of the business school, but also a graduate of the business school. He should be able to give the impression that he is not only a graduate of the business school, but also a graduate of the business school.

"One of the greatest possible contributions to civilization, to ourselves, and to posterity is in reformulating an ideal into a working principle and to project that principle into actual performance as a part of our daily life."

New England Weighs Roosevelt Speech

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, on his whirlwind tour of New England, assured audiences in Boston and Worcester that the New Deal was a bountiful Santa Claus with a big bag of prosperity for this part of the country.

"I want to speak to you briefly and simply about the prosperity of all the nation," Mr. Roosevelt declared, "for in that prosperity all New England has an immediate and direct interest."

The President was right. New England, since he assumed office, has had "an immediate and a direct interest." Also a FINANCIAL interest.

New England filled Santa's pack; other States, down South and out West, emptied it.

MR. ROOSEVELT may have mixed his geography. Perhaps he gave Massachusetts a speech intended for Texas.

Mixed geography would explain his departure from facts.

Under his AAA brain-child, Texas paid $24,380,835 in processing taxes and received, in return from the New Deal, checks totaling $133,125,589. The bargain was a good one. Texans were $108,744,754 richer.

Massachusetts, however, paid $43,759,767 and succeeded in getting back only $1,268,987. The bargain was not so good. Massachusetts was $42,490,780 poorer.

Other New England States—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut—gave $16,532,146 to the AAA. A paltry $2,126,468 was returned.

The difference—$14,425,678—went to Texas and other favored States.

IS THAT PROSPERITY FOR NEW ENGLAND?

THE NEW DEAL set up a richly-laden Christmas tree in every city and town. Mr. Roosevelt let it be known.

"At the request of local and State governments for whom the local (tax) burden had become too heavy," he said, "we assumed the cost of paying in greater part for the needy unemployed."

The President neglected to say what "local and State governments."

Probably he meant South Dakota.

That State received $142,465,416 in New Deal grants, though the Federal taxes it paid amounted to only $4,151,618. The profit was $138,293,798.

He could not have meant Connecticut.

There the New Deal made grants totaling $100,205,173 and took back, in Federal taxes, $19,305,447. The loss was $19,100,274.

And Massachusetts, which paid $328,546,890 and received grants of $345,090,785, actually raised 96 CENTS OF EVERY DOLLAR as the New Deal expended for such worthy projects as tap dancing classes.

IS THAT SAVING NEW ENGLAND?

THE PRESIDENT, still portraying Santa Claus, gave his audiences the impression that "those good people who live at the top of our economic pyramid" are paying the lion's share of his debt burden.

"That means," he declared, "that less than one per cent of the heads of American families pay more than they did; and more than 99 per cent pay less than they did."

What about the New Deal's hidden taxes?

What about the levies that helped to boost the price of eggs 66 per cent since 1932?

What about the assessments that helped to raise meat prices nearly 50 per cent?

What about the taxes that have created an average rise of 24 per cent in the nation's rents?

What about the concealed tribute tacked on everything from cribs to coffins?

Do "those good people who live at the top of our economic pyramid" eat all the eggs sold, buy all the meats, pay all the rents, occupy all the cribs or go to the grave in all the coffins?

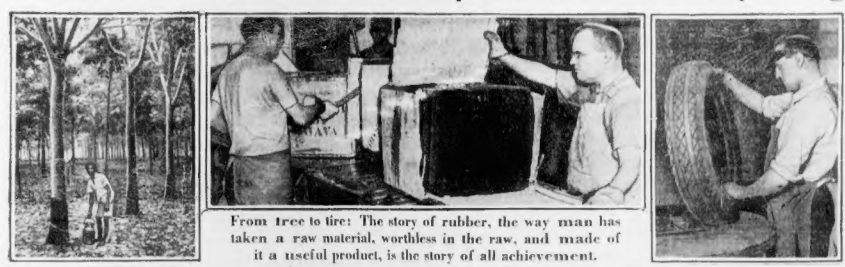

MR. ROOSEVELT, who delights in telling quaint, allegorical tales about the "nice old gentleman" who parted company with his silk hat and about the marshal who would have received the blame had he not won the Battle of the Marne, might have told another.

He could have given "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp."

That would have been appropriate.

For the "rub" is New England's. The gifts go South and West.

With Man, Or Rubber, Preparation Is Everything

From tree to tire: The story of rubber, the way man has taken a raw material, worthless in the raw, and made of it a useful product, is the story of all achievement.

THIS illustrates the making of an automobile tire, that does, for human happiness, comfort, health and pleasure, as much as any industry, probably more.

First, you see the rubber trees in far-off Asia or Brazil, natives girdling the trees, collecting sap that hardens into rubber, as the sap of the maple tree hardens into sugar.

Next, the crude rubber, Asia and South America ship it to the American factories, where skilled, well-paid labor takes the place of poorly paid tropical labor. The rubber that once came up from native ground passes through many processes and at last becomes the finished USFPU PRODUCT, a tire that will run at high speed, ever tough, smooth, wet or dry roads, for tens of thousands of miles, carrying its human load safely.

Miraculous has been the progress in tire-making, thanks to mechanical skill, plus intelligent industrial direction. A tire is once considered good if the maker could "guarantee 3000 miles, barring blowouts and punctures."

Now if you buy from a reputable tire-maker with a name nationally known, your tire will last not 3000, but 20,000, even FORTY THOUSAND MILES.

For young people, and teachers, there is a moral to this picture. Here it is, although, to the young especially, any moral is repulsive. Human raw material is like other raw material, sap of the rubber tree, maple sap, pig iron, or gold ore. The important raw material is human youth, but it must be MADE valuable.

That rubber sap and untrained youth are worthless until they have gone through processes that impart making worth while. Without intelligent labor, scientific direction, plus many processes of development, a million rubber trees would be worth less than ten cents.

The same is true as regards real usefulness for a million human beings.

A ton of crude rubber only recently was worth less than $25. A ton of manufactured tires are worth REAL money.

A ton of iron ore may be worth only a few cents after the steam shovel digs it out; after the furnace has made it into pig iron it is worth a few dollars. Transformed by more intense heat, one of its educational processes, into steel it may be worth one hundred dollars.

With care, intelligence and scientific KNOWLEDGE applied, changing the steel into machine-spings, what was once fifty cents worth of iron ore, becomes worth ONE MILLION DOLLARS, thanks to the process of EDUCATION through which the ore, the pig iron and the steel have passed.

Youth is raw material like rubber sap. To be worth something it must go through processes not agreeable, for while they do not involve melting in blast furnaces, they involve concentration, application, self-denial, use of will-power. Not by any means necessary is a college education, or even a high school education, but ABSOLUTE NECESSARY are the educating processes of experience, consistent, persistent work, with regularity and the stimulation of ambition.

If you could hear a lump of crude rubber complaining "Why am I not an automobile tire?" or a piece of pig iron asking "Why am I not a beautifully rolled wheel?" you would reply: "Because you haven't gone through the necessary processes."

Youth, to change itself from low priced raw material to something worth while, must go through processes of which the chief ingredients are CONCENTRATION AND HARD WORK.

Japan Teaches Its Future Mothers to Fly, Like Their Soldier Husbands

England has decided that battleships are more important than bombing planes in a nation's defense; but Japan does not make that mistake.

Japan, crowding England and the United States on the seas, does not neglect the air.

Living like England on "a tight little island," Japan must be prepared to keep the seas open to her ships in time of war, to bring in necessary foods and raw materials. To do that, a nation must have bombing planes, flown by skillful, daring pilots.

Japanese leaders do not lack courage, but military experts say that Japanese pilots lack the natural ability to make good pilots. That is strange, because Japanese have a "feel" for machinery that surpasses many other races.

It is said that Japan knows that Russian pilots are far superior to Japanese; a real threat to Japan only a few hours away from Russian air bases.

Russian planes could sweep down on Japanese cities without warning; Japanese planes would have to cross thousands of miles of enemy territory before they could reach any of Russia's vital points, thus protecting Russia from surprise attacks.

Japan is feverishly preparing against this threat from the air. Here you see young girls being trained in the art of flying in gliders.

Man was born to walk; he must learn slowly to feel nature in the air, a region of this earth reserved for the birds. Japan, faster than any other country, has modernized its people. The government has been a guiding, saving force in this modernization of a race. They preach and practice this motto: "What others have invented, we can improve upon."

Thoroughness is their predominant national characteristic. And being thorough, Japan teaches its mothers to fly, like their soldier husbands.

When I saw him he was in his glider and I saw him in his glider. He was in his glider and I saw him in his glider. He was in his glider and I saw him in his glider.

Girl pilot learns the principles of flying by steering a glider.

Japan trains girl pilots to compete against the young men flyers.

Listen, World!

I well remember the allegorical phrase of shock, surprise, peace, and delight with which I greeted the discovery that loyalty is not a natural virtue, but a cultivated habit. Then I realized that I was not a natural virtue, but a cultivated habit.

ONLY A WHIM I realized, of course, that this was a whim. I was not a natural virtue, but a cultivated habit. I was not a natural virtue, but a cultivated habit.

But alas, I was extremely and frequently otherwise. There were times when I simply couldn't stand anything—nothing. I was not a natural virtue, but a cultivated habit.

But alas, I was extremely and frequently otherwise. There were times when I simply couldn't stand anything—nothing. I was not a natural virtue, but a cultivated habit.
